EDITORIAL POLICIES & GUIDELINES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

CISO MAG receives several requests for article contributions. However, many of those requests are turned down as they do not conform to our editorial policies. Please read our policies carefully to determine if you qualify to write for CISO MAG.

Who can write?

You should have a background and thorough knowledge of Cybersecurity. We prefer articles from certified cybersecurity/infosecurity professionals and practicing CISOs, CSOs, and other C-Suite executives. Those with a track record of working in government agencies and service industries (Banking, Telecom, Retail, Manufacturing, etc.) will be given higher preference in the validation process.

We do not accept articles written by casual bloggers, marketers, ghost writers, SEO specialist and PR executives.

Where will your article appear?

Your articles will be reviewed by the Editorial Committee that decides if your article should appear on the CISO MAG website (Interviews or Features sections) – or in CISO MAG (e-magazine).

Topics

Please see the CISO MAG website (Features section) and the Editorial Calendar on this website.

GENERAL WRITING GUIDELINES

1. Write articles that would interest the CISO or cybersecurity professional. Refrain from explaining basic concepts like, “how Ransomware or Phishing works,” for example. Our readers are well-versed with such concepts.
2. Share your experiences, research, and knowledge.
3. Write about the applications, business scenarios, best practices, business impact, trends, new technological innovation.
4. The articles should be neutral (no direct pitches or plugs for the product).
5. We will remove external links to product promotional pages and malicious sites.
6. We encourage original content. Our editors use tools to check for plagiarisms. If found, the article is immediately rejected/removed from the platform.
7. Refrain from political commentary, references to countries engaging in cyber warfare through state actors, the current trade wars, slander, defamatory statements, and other negative news.
8. The article should be EXCLUSIVE and never published before.

Article Length

Recommended article length for online/Website: 800 – 1,000 words.

For e-magazine: 1,500 – 2,500 words.
Right of way / LEGAL

1. CISO MAG reserves the right to reject the article or ask for a revision if it does not conform to our editorial standards.
2. CISO MAG reserves the right to change the headline/title, sub-titles and body text of the article.
3. CISO MAG reserves the right to reuse the content in the article for social media promotion on CISO MAG social channels or republish the article on its website or in a future issue of its e-zine.

Send your article synopsis and title to: editorial@cisomag.com

========================================